Site Description

bOing! is an indoor and outdoor event utilising the University of Kent grounds and venues. The majority of the area is flat and are serviced by a network of paths, however mobility problems are posed on grass areas, particularly in bad weather conditions. If it rains it may get muddy and access around the site (other than on paths) may be very difficult. Electric wheelchairs can tackle most areas without too much trouble but the ground can be uneven in places.

There are around 15 different venues and performance areas, which are located around the site.

Handy Tips and Information

bOing! is a very safe place to be, but the following standard festival advice is worth taking in nonetheless... better safe than sorry!

- We have a basecamp area in case you need some respite, which is also an official meeting point. Be aware of your surroundings and keep an eye on your children.
- Look after your belongings – make sure you keep your mobile, smart devices and wallet/purse safe and out of sight. If you find any items, please hand them in at Basecamp/Info tent or to a bOing! team member. If you lose an item, please inquire at Basecamp about lost items. If you notice any unattended bags/luggage items please do not move these and instead contact a member of the bOing! team.
- We recommend activating the 'find my phone' app or similar on your smart phone before coming to the festival.
- Cashpoints are available on-site.
- Don't leave your drink unattended and if it is hot please make sure you remain hydrated.
- Please wear appropriate clothing for the weather. We recommend using sun protection if it is sunny, staying in the shade during the hottest part of the day and waterproof coats if the weather is rainy.
- If you see anything that concerns you or if you see anyone acting suspiciously please speak to the nearest bOing! team member – help us make bOing! a safe and pleasant place to be.
